1. The Kangdong Political School at Kangdong (126-06, 39-09), North Korea trains guerrillas for minor tactical operations in South Korea. 25X1X
2. The address of the school is: 339 Taseong-ni, Sungho-myun, Kangdong-gun., Pyongan-namdo. This location is 16 kilometers east of Pyongyang Railroad Station, 4.5 kilometers west of Sungho-ri Railroad Station, and 2 kilometers north of Ipsok Railroad Station.
3. Members of the school are selected from proven party members of the South Korean Labor Party. Education and physical qualifications are of little importance. Recruiting offices are maintained in North Korea, but recruiting teams comb South Korea to obtain candidates for the school. The candidates report to their respective recruiting office by means of prearranged coded passwords which are honored on the 38th parallel by the North Korean security forces. The recruiting offices are at: Haeju (125-42, 38-02); Yonchon (127-04, 38-06); Namchonjom (126-24, 38-20); Wonsan (127-26, 39-10); Yanggang (128-38, 38-04); and Pyongyang (125-44, 39-01).
4. The course lasts for three months and consists of the following subjects:
 - History of Bolshevism
 - History of the Soviet Revolution
 - Plans for attacking targets in South Korea
 - Methods of printing propaganda materials
5. The students are also given tactical exercises in the school training area, which includes 30,000 pyong (24 acres) of land, and in the mountains in the vicinity. They are taught small unit attack methods, ambushes and minor tactics.
6. After graduation students have the following missions:
 - To assassinate South Korean political leaders, army officers and police officials.
 - To utilize propaganda to cause confusion in the minds of the South Koreans.
 - To set fire to important buildings and plants in South Korea.
